

Natural avalanche observed on Monday (4/10) in northern Bridger Range. New snow and wind over the weekend created unstable dry slabs. This avalanche appears to be triggered by a cornice fall and is up to approx.3 feet deep. Similar slides can be triggered by a skier or rider, and are most likely during or immediately following storms. Photo: H. Haselton

Advisory Region
Bridger Range
Bridger Range, 2017-04-11